

List of World War II flying aces

This is a list of World War II flying aces. Fighter aces in World War II had tremendously varying kill scores, affected as they were by many factors: the pilot's skill level, the performance of the airplane he flew and those he flew against, how long he served, his opportunity to meet the enemy in the air (Allied to Axis disproportion), whether he was the formation's leader or a wingman, the standards his air service brought to the awarding of victory credits, et cetera.

Towards the end of the war, the Axis powers had largely exhausted their supply of skilled pilots and the replacements did not have as much opportunity to gain enough experience to be successful. Additionally, national policies differed; German, Italian, and Japanese^[1] pilots tended to return to the cockpit over and over again until they were killed.^[N 1]

It is not clear what impact each nation's rules for score crediting have on the counts listed below. Germans credited a shared victory to only one pilot, while the French credited full victory to all participants. British, Finnish and US air forces credited fractional shares of aerial victories, resulting in fractions, such as 11½, which might be for example 10 aircraft and three shares with the second pilot. Some U.S. commands also credited aircraft destroyed on the ground. The Soviets counted only solo kills, while group kills were counted separately, as did the Japanese. The Italian Air Force did not officially credit victories to individual pilots, but to their unit as a whole. Probable kills are usually left out of the list.

It is necessary to emphasize that the question of assessing and comparing the success rate of fighters by number of victories is one of the more problematic. There are disputes about what is "shot down" and what is "air victory", but the most problematic seems to be credibility of reports and reliability of its confirmation, which was substantially different in particular air forces. As the most reliable is considered the confirmation of the victories in RAF, using comparison of testimonials of participants and—if possible—film material.

Günther Rall

Erich Rudorffer

Alexander Pokryshkin, Soviet ace of World War II

Mato Dukovac, the highest scoring Croatian ace

Ilmari Juutilainen, top flying ace of the Finnish Air Force and the highest scoring non-German fighter pilot of all time

Ján Režňák, the highest scoring Slovak ace

Richard Bong, the highest scoring US ace

Robert S. Johnson, the first USAAF fighter pilot in the European theater to surpass Eddie Rickenbacker's World War I score of 26 victories.

Tetsuzo Iwamoto, Japanese Navy fighter ace, often credited with being the top scoring Japanese ace

Marmaduke 'Pat' Pattle, the highest scoring United Kingdom and Empire ace

Teresio Martinoli, the highest scoring Regia Aeronautica ace

Adrian Warburton DSO & Bar, DFC & Two Bars, RAF reconnaissance pilot and ace

Alexandru Șerbănescu, highest scoring Romanian ace at the time of his death (second highest overall)^[2]

This background, along with the symbol "†", indicates that the pilot was killed in action, missing in action, died of wounds, or was killed in a flying accident during World War II.
