Very stressful trip to Japan starting on January 17. Ferry cancelled due to Typhoon on 17th, rescheduled for 18th – ferry company gave seats away – had to travel in open economy class – very uncomfortable in Philippines. On 19th, flew to Japan. Trip uneventful. Tuesday noon had an episode of skipped heartbeats and numbness in arm and leg at noon walking to lunch. Lasted about 30 minutes. No other problem that day. On Wednesday, Jan 21, had another episode at noon walking to lunch but this episode lasted for over 2 hours. Felt great general discomfort and had some palpitations now and again until 3PM. Went to hospital at 3PM. In emergency room, cardiologist analyzed as an unstable heart condition that required an immediate angioplasty and possible stent insertion. He put probability at 30% of a major MI soon. Discovered a problem in an artery in angiogram and inserted stent. Seems to have alleviated most of the symptoms. All tests were OK after surgery – stayed overnight and Doctor gave OK to return to work on Thursday. Released from hospital and rested at hotel rest of Thursday.

Were any safeguards provided? Used? If so, Please Explain: none

What were you doing before the incident?

Editing system manual for the shaking table system.

Have you ever had the same or similar injury before? If so, please provide type of injury, date of injury and type of medical treatment received.
YES. I had a mild MI in 1999 and had a stent installed in my heart. In 2006 and 20013 I had additional stents installed as precautions due to scheduled angiograms to test my existing condition. All previous stents are still considered OK (patent in medical terms).

Do you have any medical conditions that may impact your recovery? (Diabetes, high blood pressure, etc.) I have high blood pressure and control cholesterol
